

Get Out There!

Boston's History of National Parks Museum

With only two National Parks in the Boston area, Get Out There! aims to bring the experience and history of National Parks locally and nationwide to those living and visiting the city.

The design for Get Out There will use grid organization to lay out and stack spaces. Three floors will be centralized around a support core while walls and stairs will form a designated route to guide visitors through exhibits with a variety of tactile, visual, and digital displays. The elements of sound, color, and space, along with materials inspired by the history and landscapes of the United States, will simulate the natural environment. The second level will be balanced on either side of the third floor, leading visitors to an experiential moment at the top of the stairs.

Located at:
550 Harrison Ave
Boston, MA 02118

